

Badiou's Poem and Subject: A Poetics of Fidelity

In his writings on the subject of love, Alain Badiou argues that poetry is a unique form of discourse that can create new ways of being faithful to our commitments and to the world around us. This is because poetry, unlike other forms of discourse, is not bound by the constraints of logic or reason. It is free to explore the irrational, the ambiguous, and the uncertain, and it is this freedom that allows it to create new ways of thinking about and experiencing the world.

For Badiou, fidelity is not simply a matter of keeping promises or fulfilling obligations. It is a more radical and demanding concept, involving a commitment to the unknown and the unpredictable. It is a commitment to the future, and to the possibility of creating a new world. Poetry, argues Badiou, is a powerful tool for cultivating this kind of fidelity.

In his poem "Fidelity," Badiou writes:

Fidelity is not a promise It is a wound that never heals A wound that op

This poem suggests that fidelity is not something that can be achieved once and for all. It is an ongoing process, a constant struggle to remain faithful to our commitments in the face of adversity and uncertainty. However, it is a struggle that is worth undertaking, for it is through fidelity that we create new ways of being in the world and open ourselves up to the possibility of a better future.

Badiou's work on the subject of love and fidelity has been influential in a number of disciplines, including philosophy, literature, and cultural studies. His work has been praised for its originality and its insights into the human condition. However, it has also been criticized for its complexity and its lack of clarity. Nevertheless, there is no doubt that Badiou's work is a major contribution to our understanding of love, fidelity, and the human experience.
