Troubleshooting Verizon Fios Phone Service

1. Check the power

The first step is to make sure that your Verizon Fios phone service is powered up. Check to see if the power cord is securely plugged into both the phone and the power outlet. If the power cord is loose, try plugging it in more firmly. If the power cord is damaged, you will need to replace it.

2. Check the phone line

The next step is to check the phone line. Make sure that the phone line is securely plugged into both the phone and the wall jack. If the phone line is loose, try plugging it in more firmly. If the phone line is damaged, you will need to replace it.

3. Reset the phone

If you have checked the power and the phone line and your Verizon Fios phone service is still not working, you can try resetting the phone. To reset the phone, unplug it from the power outlet and wait for 30 seconds. Then, plug the phone back into the power outlet and wait for it to reboot. Once the phone has rebooted, try making a call to see if the problem has been resolved.

4. Contact Verizon Fios

If you have tried all of the troubleshooting steps above and your Verizon Fios phone service is still not working, you can contact Verizon Fios for support. Verizon Fios offers a variety of support options, including online chat, phone support, and in-home service calls. To contact Verizon Fios, visit the Verizon Fios website or call 1-800-VERIZON (1-800-837-4966).
