When his son, Lupin, took his own life at the age of 22, David Rakoff was left reeling. In the aftermath of this unimaginable loss, Rakoff began writing letters to Lupin, a way of processing his grief and making sense of the senseless. These letters, which were never intended to be published, are now collected in Dear Lupin: Letters to a Wayward Son.

Dear Lupin is a moving and deeply personal exploration of the complexities of fatherhood and mental illness. Rakoff writes with brutal honesty about his own struggles as a parent, his hopes and dreams for his son, and his despair in the face of Lupin's illness. But Dear Lupin is also a story of love, resilience, and the enduring power of the human spirit.

Rakoff's writing is both heartbreaking and hopeful, and his insights into the nature of grief and mental illness are invaluable. Dear Lupin is a must-read for anyone who has ever struggled with the challenges of being a parent or a child, or who has ever lost someone they loved.

Praise for Dear Lupin

"A beautiful and heartbreaking book about the complexities of fatherhood, mental illness, and the enduring power of love." — The New York Times

"Rakoff's writing is both elegant and devastating, and his insights into the nature of grief and mental illness are invaluable." — The Washington Post

"A powerful and moving memoir that will stay with you long after you finish reading it." — People
